

STS 251/88

MINISTRY OF JUSTICE - Statutory Notice

THE PENAL-CODE

WITH AMENDMENTS

NO (111) 1969
PENAL CODE

In the name of the people
The Presidency

Based on the provisions of the fiftieth article of the temporary constitution and derived from the submissions. of the minister of Justice and what has been approved by the council of ministers and ratified by the Revolutionary Command Council.

The Code attests the following:

PART ONE
General Principles

CHAPTER ONE
Penal Legislation

SECTION ONE
The Legality of crime and punishment

Paragraph 1 - There is only punishment of an act or omission based on a law which stipulates that it is a criminal offence at the time it is committed. No penalty or precautionary measure that is not prescribed by law may be imposed.

SECTION TWO
Extent of the application of the Penal Code

SUB-SECTION ONE
Application of the law in respect of time

Paragraph 2 - (1) The occurrence and consequences of an offence are determined in accordance with the law in force-at the time of its commission and the time of commission is determined by reference to the time at which the criminal act occurs and not by reference to the time when the consequence of the offence is realised:

(2) However, if one or more laws are enacted after an offence has been committed and before final judgment is given, then the law that is most favorable to the convicted person is applied.

(3) If a law is enacted after final judgment is given and that law decriminalizes the act or omission for which the defendant has been convicted, the sentence shall be quashed and the penal consequences of the sentence shall become void. This does not under any circumstances prejudice any sentence previously served as long as the new law does not stipulate to the contrary. The court that originally imposed the sentence must order that the sentence be quashed at the request of the convicted person or the public prosecutor.

(4) If the new law merely reduces the severity of the punishment, the court which originally passed the sentence may, on the application of the convicted person or the public prosecutor, review the sentence imposed in the light of the provisions of the new law.

Paragraph 3 - If a law is enacted which criminalizes an act, or increases the severity of the penalty prescribed for that act for a specified period, then the expiry of that period will not prevent the sentence from being carried out nor will it prevent an action being brought in respect of offences committed during that period.

Paragraph 4 - The new law applies to continuous or consecutive offences committed before it is enacted or to habitual offences which continue to be committed after that law is enacted and, if the provisions of the new law dealing with reoffending or multiple offences are amended then it will apply to any offence by which the defendant becomes a reoffender or multiple offender even though they are in respect of offences carried out before the law is enacted.

Paragraph 5 - Precautionary measures are only imposed in the circumstances and under the conditions that are stipulated by law.. Provisions relating to penalties apply to precautionary measures because they are not retroactive and because the law that is most favourable to the defendant is applied.

SUB-SECTION TWO

Application of the law in respect of place

1. Territorial jurisdiction

Paragraph 6 - The provisions of this Code are enforceable in respect of offences committed in Iraq. An offence is considered to have been committed in Iraq if a criminal act is committed there or if the consequence of that act is realized or is intended to be realised there. In all circumstances, the law applies to all parties to the offence of which all or part occurs in Iraq even though any of those parties are abroad at the time and regardless of whether he is a principal or accessory to the offence.

Paragraph 7 - Iraq's regional jurisdiction includes the territory of the Republic of Iraq and all areas under its control including its coastal waters and airspace as well as any foreign territory occupied by the Iraqi army in so far as any offence affects the security or interests of the army.

Iraqi ships and aircraft are subject to the territorial jurisdiction of the Republic of Iraq wherever they may be.

Paragraph 8 - This Code is not applicable to offences committed on foreign ships in Iraqi ports or coastal waters unless the offence affects the security of the region or the offender or victim is Iraqi or if assistance is requested from the Iraqi authorities. The Code is not applicable to offences committed on board foreign aircraft in Iraqi airspace unless the aircraft lands in Iraq after the offence has been committed or unless it affects the security of Iraq or the offender or victim is an Iraqi or assistance is requested from the Iraqi authorities.

2. Material Jurisdiction

Paragraph 9 - This Code is applicable to any person who commits the following offences outside Iraq:

(1) An offence that affects the internal or external security of the State or that is against the Republican regime or its legally issued bonds or stamps or the forging of official banknotes.

(2) The forging, counterfeiting or imitation of notes or coins that are in circulation legally or through common use in Iraq or abroad.

3. Personal jurisdiction

Paragraph 10 - Any Iraqi citizen who commits an act abroad and does so as principal or accessory to an offence that is considered a felony or misdemeanor under the provision of this code is punishable in accordance with its provisions if he is now in Iraq and if the offence is punishable under the laws of the land in which it is committed.

This provision is applicable whether or not the offender has obtained Iraqi citizenship after the commission of the offence or whether he had Iraqi citizenship after the offence was committed and subsequently lost that citizenship.

Paragraph 11 - This Code is not applicable to offences that are committed in Iraq by persons who benefit from statutory protection under the terms of international agreements or international or domestic law.

Paragraph 12 - (1) This Code is applicable to any public official or agent of the Republic of Iraq who commits abroad a felony or misdemeanor stipulated by this Code in the course of his duty or as a consequence thereof.

(2) It is also applicable to Iraqi diplomats who commit abroad a felony or misdemeanor stipulated by this Code while enjoying the protection conferred upon them in accordance with international law.

4. Universal jurisdiction

Paragraph 13 - In circumstances other than those stipulated in paragraphs 9, 10 and 11, the provisions of this Code are applicable to all those who enter Iraq subsequent to committing an offence abroad whether as principals or accessories to the following offences:

Destroying or causing damage to international means of communications or trading in women, children, slaves or drugs.

Paragraph 14 - (1) No legal proceedings may be brought against any person who commits an offence outside Iraq except by permission of the Minister of Justice. Such person cannot be tried if a final judgment to acquit or convict him has already been given by a foreign court and any sentence imposed on him as a result of that trial has been served in full or if the relevant proceedings or such sentence has been annulled or quashed in accordance with applicable law and the final sentence or annulment of his trial or quashing of his sentence falls within the jurisdiction of the law of the land in which the judgment was given.

(2) If the penalty imposed is not served in full or if a verdict of not guilty is given in respect of an offence stipulated in Paragraphs 9 and 12 arising from the fact that the offence is not punishable under the law of that land, then legal proceedings may be brought against the accused in Iraqi courts.

Paragraph 15 - When the sentence imposed on the convicted person has been served, the length of time he has spent in detention or prison abroad for the offence for which he was convicted, will be taken into consideration.

CHAPTER TWO General Principles and definitions

Paragraph 16 - (1) The provisions in PART ONE of this Code are applicable in respect of offences prescribed in other penal laws and regulations unless stipulated to the contrary.

(2) By final judgment is meant in this code all judgments in respect of which all statutory aspects of an appeal have been exhausted or the time limits for an appeal against that judgment have expired.

Paragraph 17 - The provisions of this Code do not apply to liabilities for damages or compensation.

Paragraph 18 - The prescribed periods in this Code are calculated in accordance with the Gregorian Calendar.

Paragraph 19 - In applying the provisions of this Code or any other penal code, the following definitions are used, unless stipulated to the contrary:

(1) A citizen - is a subject of the Republic of Iraq and, if he has no nationality, he is considered to be a citizen if he is resident in Iraq.

(2) A public official is any official, employee or worker who is entrusted with a public task in the service of the government or its official or semi-official agencies or agencies belonging to it or placed under its control.. This includes the Prime Minister, his deputies and ministers and the members of representative, administrative and municipal councils. It also includes arbitrators, experts, creditors' agents (corporate representatives), official receivers, sequestrates, members of boards of directors, directors and employees of foundations, companies, corporations, organizations and institutions .in which the government or any of its official or semi-official agencies has a financial interest in any capacity whatsoever. In general, he is any person who works in the public service either paid or unpaid.

When a criminal act is committed by a public official in any of the capacities set out in this Sub-Paragraph, then the fact that he is no longer carrying out his employment, service or work does not prevent the provision of this Code being applied in respect of that public official.

(3) Publication - methods of publication are considered to be:

- (a) acts, gestures or movements if they occur on a public highway, during a public gathering or in a place that is open to the public and much frequented and exposed to the public view or if they occur so that they can be witnessed by any person in such place or if they are transmitted by some mechanical means.
- (b) A spoken or shouted remark if it is announced or repeated in any of those places mentioned or if it is announced or repeated in such a way that it can be heard by any person in such places or if it is broadcast by mechanical or other means so that it can be heard by any person who is not connected in any way with the remark.
- (c) Newspapers and other printed matter as well as other means of propaganda and publication.
- (d) A writing, drawing, picture, sign or film or anything similar if it is displayed in one of the places mentioned or if it is distributed or sold to more than one person or offered for sale anywhere.

(4) An act is any criminal behavior prohibited by law whether or not it is positive or negative such as negligence or omission, unless stipulated to the contrary.

CHAPTER THREE The Criminal Offence

SECTION ONE The nature of criminal offences

Paragraph 20 - The nature of criminal offences is either ordinary or political.

Paragraph 21 - (1) A political offence is one which is committed with a political motive or which violates the political rights either of the public or of the individual. All other offences are considered to be ordinary.

However, the following offences are not considered to be political even though they are committed with a political motive:

- (a) Offences that are committed with a selfish or base motive.
- (b) Offences affecting the external security of the State.
- (c) Murder and attempted murder.
- (d) Attempts on the life of the Head of State.
- (e) Terrorist offences.
- (f) Dishonorable offences such as theft, embezzlement, forgery, breach of trust, fraud, bribery and rape.

(2) If the court considers the offence to be political, it must show that in its judgment.

Paragraph 22 - (1) Life imprisonment replaces the death sentence for political offences.

(2) On conviction for a political offence, any penalty imposed for a previous political offence is not taken into consideration nor is there a subsequent loss of civil rights or privileges nor is the convicted person prevented from managing and disposing of his assets.

SECTION TWO

The categories of criminal offences

Paragraph 23 - There are three categories of criminal offence: felony, misdemeanor and infraction. The type of offence determines the severity of the penalty prescribed by the Code. If the penalty for any offence involves both detention and a fine, then the category of that offence will determine the extent of the period of detention prescribed by the Code.

Paragraph 24 - The category of the offence is not altered if the Court substitutes the prescribed penalty for the penalty for a lesser type of offence whether or not it is due to a mitigating excuse or an extenuating legal circumstance, unless otherwise stipulated by law.

Paragraph 25 - A felony is an offence punishable by one of the following penalties:

- (1) Death.
- (2) Life imprisonment.
- (3) 5 to 15 years imprisonment (i¹)

Paragraph 26 - A misdemeanor is an offence punishable by one of the following penalties:

- (1) Detention with hard labor or ordinary detention for a period of between 3 months and 5 years.
- (2) A fine.

(i) As amended in accordance with Paragraph 1 of Law No 207 (1970) published in Al-Waqai' Al-Iraqiya.

Paragraph 27 - An infraction is an offence punishable by one of the following penalties:

(1) Detention for a period of between 24 hours and 3 months.

(2) A fine not exceeding 30 Dinars.

SECTION THREE Elements of a crime

SUB-SECTION 1 The physical element

1. Basic principles

Paragraph 28 - The physical element of an offence is the criminal behaviour involved in the commission of a criminal act stipulated by the Code or failure to carry out an act stipulated by the Code.

Paragraph 29 - (1) A person is not responsible for an offence that did not result from his criminal behaviour but he is responsible for that offence if, together with his criminal behavior, some other prior, contemporaneous or subsequent cause, even though he was unaware of it, played a part in its commission.

(2) However, if that cause alone is sufficient to effect the consequence of the offence, then the offender in this case is only responsible for the act that he has committed.

2. An attempt to commit an offence

Paragraph 30 - This is the initiation of an act with intent to commit a felony or misdemeanor which is prevented or frustrated for reasons unrelated to the intentions of the offender.

An attempt to commit an offence is considered to include all acts that are impossible to carry out and which are attempted with intent to commit a felony or misdemeanor whether or not it is for a reason relating to the object of the offence or to the means by which it is committed as long as the offender does not believe as a result of misconception or total ignorance that it is within his power to achieve the result of the offence. Merely the intention to commit an offence or preparations to do so are not considered an attempt unless otherwise stipulated by law.

Paragraph 31 - Attempted felonies or misdemeanors are punishable by the following penalties unless otherwise stipulated by law.

(1) Life imprisonment if the prescribed penalty for the offence is death.

(2) Imprisonment for a term not exceeding 15 years if the prescribed penalty for the offence is life imprisonment.

(3) Imprisonment for a term not exceeding half the maximum penalty prescribed for the offence if the penalty is imprisonment for a term of years. If half the maximum penalty is 5 years or less, then the penalty in that case shall be a period not exceeding half the maximum penalty prescribed for the offence.

(4) A period of detention or a fine not exceeding half the maximum penalty prescribed for the offence.

Paragraph 32 - Provisions relating to incidental or supplemental penalties and precautionary measures prescribed for offences committed are applicable to attempted offences.

SUB-SECTION TWO The Mental Element

Criminal intent and mistake

Paragraph 33 - (1) Criminal intent is the existence in the mind of the offender of an intention to commit the criminal act with a view to realizing the consequence of the offence that has occurred or any other criminal consequence.

(2) Intent maybe simple or premeditated.

(3) Premeditation is the resolute contemplation of the commission of an offence before it is committed and is far removed from an outburst of jealous rage or mental turmoil.

(4) Premeditation can be established whether or not the intent of the offender is directed towards a specific person or merely a person he has met or encountered or whether the intent is dependant on something happening or on some condition.

Paragraph 34 - An offence is premeditated if the offender has, criminal intent. An offence is therefore considered to be premeditated if:

(1) It is prohibited by law or by an agreement binding upon a person and he fails to act in accordance with that law or agreement, intending to commit the offence that results directly from such omission.

(2) If the offender foresees the criminal consequence of his action and embarks on that course of action, accepting the risk involved.

Paragraph 35 - An offence is not premeditated if the criminal consequence occurs as a result of a mistake on the part of the offender whether or not such mistake is due to negligence, thoughtlessness, lack of due care and attention or lack of consideration for any law, rule or regulation.

Paragraph 36 - If the offender is unaware of the existence of an aggravating circumstance which changes the nature of the offence, then he is not responsible for it but can benefit from that excuse even though he is unaware of it.

Paragraph 37 - (1) No person can plead ignorance of the provisions of this Code or any other penal code as long as it was not possible by reason of an act of God for him to be aware of the code under which the offence is punishable.

(2) The Court has the right to exempt an alien from the penalty for an offence that he commits within a maximum of 7 days following the date of his arrival in Iraq if his ignorance of the Code is established and if the offence is not punishable by law in his country of residence.

Paragraph 38 The motive for the commission of an offence is not taken into consideration unless otherwise stipulated by law.

SECTION FOUR Justification

1. Performance of a duty

Paragraph 39 - There is no crime if the act occurs in performance of a duty prescribed by the Code.

Paragraph 40 - There is no crime if the act is committed by a public official or agent in the following circumstances:

(1) If he commits the act in good faith in the performance of his legal duty or if he considers that carrying it out is within his jurisdiction.

(2) If he commits the act in performance of an order from a superior which he is obliged to obey or which he feels he is obliged to obey. It must be established in these circumstances that the belief of the offender in the legitimacy of the act is reasonable and that he committed the act only after taking suitable precautions. Moreover, there is no penalty in the second instance if the Code does not afford the official an opportunity to question the order issued to him.

2. Exercising a legal right

Paragraph 41 - There is no crime if the act is committed while exercising a legal right. The following are considered to be in exercise of a legal right:

(1) The punishment of a wife by her husband, the disciplining by parents and teachers of children under their authority within certain limits prescribed by law or by custom.

(2) A surgical operation or professional treatment when it is carried out with the consent of the patient or his legal representative or without their consent in cases of emergency.

(3) An act of violence during the course of a sporting event when the rules of that sport have been complied with:

(4) An act of violence committed against any person caught in the act of committing a felony or misdemeanor with a view to apprehending him.

3. The right of legal defense

Paragraph 42 - There is no crime if the act is committed while exercising a right of legal defence.

This right exists if the following conditions apply:

(1) If a person defends himself and his property against the . threat of a criminal act or reasonably believes that such threat exists.

(2) If he is unable to take refuge with the public authorities in order to protect himself from such threat at the appropriate time.

(3) If he has no other means with which to ward off such threat. In exercising this right, it makes no difference that the threat of danger is directed towards the life and property of the person concerned or towards the life and property of others.

Paragraph 43 - The right of legal self-defense does not permit murder unless it is intended that one of the following situations is to be avoided:

(1) An act as a result of which it is reasonably feared that death or serious injury may occur.

(2) Rape or buggery of a man or woman against his or her will.

(3) Kidnapping.

Paragraph 44 - The right of legal defense of property does not permit murder unless it is intended that one of the following situations is to be avoided:

(1) Arson.

(2) Theft.

(3) Entering at night a residential building or part thereof.

(4) An act as a result of which it is reasonably feared that death or injury may occur.

Paragraph 45 - The right of legal defense does not permit the infliction of greater harm than is necessary and if the person concerned oversteps the limits of that right either deliberately or negligently or if he mistakenly thinks that he is 'in a situation of legal defence, then he will be responsible for the offence he commits. In this case, the court is only permitted to impose the penalty for a misdemeanor rather than that prescribed for a felony and the penalty for an infraction rather than that prescribed for a misdemeanor.

Paragraph 46 - The right of legal defense does not permit any person to resist a member of the public authorities in the execution of his duties even though he has overstepped the bounds of that duty while acting in good faith, unless it is reasonably feared that death or serious injury will result.

SECTION FIVE

Parties to a crime

1. The principal and accessory

Paragraph 47 - The following are considered to be principals to an offence:

(1) Any person who commits an offence by himself or with others.

(2) Any person who participates in the commission of an offence that consists of a number of acts and who willfully carries out one of those acts during the commission of that offence.

(3) Any person who incites another in any way to commit an act contributing to an offence if that person is not in any way criminally liable for the offence.

Paragraph 48 - The following are considered to be accessories to an offence:

(1) Any person who incites another to commit an offence and that offence is committed on the basis of such incitement.

(2) Any person who conspires with others to commit an offence and that offence is committed on the basis of such conspiracy.

(3) Any person who knowingly supplies the principal to an offence with a weapon, instrument or anything else to commit an offence or deliberately assists him in any other way to carry out those acts for which he has received assistance.

Paragraph 49 - An accessory is considered to be a principal to an offence under the provisions of Paragraph 48, if he is present during the commission of that offence or any act contributing to that offence.

Paragraph 50 - (1) Any person who participates in the commission of an offence as principal or accessory is punishable by the penalty prescribed for that offence unless otherwise stipulated by law. .

(2) An accessory is punishable by the penalty prescribed by law, even though the principal is not punishable due to lack of criminal intent on his part or for other circumstances in respect of him.

Paragraph 51 - If there exists material circumstances in the offence that would by their nature increase or decrease the penalty, then they will affect all parties to the offence, principal or accessory, whether they are aware of those circumstances or not.

If there are personal aggravating circumstances which facilitated the commission of the offence, then they will not affect any person other than the person concerned, unless that other person is aware of them.

Any other circumstance will not affect the person concerned, whether or not it is aggravating or extenuating.

Paragraph 52 - If there exists any personal defences which absolve one of the parties to an offence, whether as principal or accessory, from the penalty or which reduce that penalty, then it affects only the person concerned.

Any material defence that absolves a party to an offence from the penalty or reduces that penalty will apply in respect of all parties to the offence.

Paragraph 53 - A party to an offence, whether as principal or accessory, is only punishable by the penalty for the offence that has actually been committed even though he did not intend to commit the offence, as long as the offence that is committed is the probable consequence of his participation in it.

Paragraph 54 - If the intent of a party to an offence, whether as principal or accessory, or if his knowledge of the offence differs from the intent of the other parties to that offence or the extent of their knowledge of it, then they will each be punishable according to their intent or the extent of their knowledge of the offence.

2. Criminal Conspiracy

Paragraph 55 - A criminal conspiracy is considered to be an agreement between two or more people to commit a felony or misdemeanour such as theft, fraud or forgery, whether or not it is a specified offence or arises out of acts that are aided and abetted, even though that agreement is in the initial planning stages or has been in existence only for a short time.

The agreement is considered to be a criminal one whether the final objective is to commit an offence or to achieve a legitimate aim by the commission of that offence.

Paragraph 56 - (1) Any member of a criminal conspiracy, even though he did not attempt to commit the planned offence, is punishable by a term of imprisonment not exceeding 7 years if the planned offence is a felony or by a period of detention not exceeding 2 years or a fine not exceeding 150 Dinars if the offence is a misdemeanor. This is as long as the law does not stipulate a specific penalty for conspiracy.

(2) If the aim of the conspiracy is to commit a specified offence for which the penalty is less than that stipulated in the preceding Sub-Paragraph, then the penalty will not be greater than one quarter of the maximum limit prescribed for that offence.

Paragraph 57 - (1) Any person who attempts to set up a criminal conspiracy or who plays a major part in it is punishable by a term of imprisonment not exceeding 10 years if that offence is a felony and by a period of detention not exceeding 3 years or a fine or both if the offence is a misdemeanor.

(2) If the aim of the conspiracy is to commit a specified offence and the penalty for that offence is less than that stipulated in the previous Sub-Paragraph, then the penalty will not be greater than one quarter of the maximum limit prescribed for that offence.

Paragraph 58 - Any person who gives assistance to a conspirator or facilitates the meetings of a group of conspirators or gives them shelter or helps them in any way knowing the aim of the conspiracy is punishable by the penalty prescribed in Paragraph 56.

Paragraph 59 - Any person is exempted from the penalties prescribed in Paragraphs 56, 57 and 58 if he promptly notifies the public authorities of the existence of a criminal conspiracy and of the participants before any offence is committed as a result of that conspiracy and before those authorities have begun to investigate the conspirators.

If the authorities are notified after they have begun their investigations, then he is not exempted from the penalty unless the information leads to the arrest of the conspirators.

CHAPTER FOUR The Criminal.

SECTION ONE Criminal liability and exemptions from it

1. Loss of reason and volition .

Paragraph 60 - Any person who, at the time of the commission of the offence, is suffering from a loss of reason or volition due to insanity or infirmity of mind or because he is in a state of intoxication or under the influence of drugs resulting from the consumption of intoxicating or narcotic substances given to him against his will or without his knowledge or due to any other reason which leads one to believe that he has lost his reason or volition is not criminally liable. However, if he is not suffering from any infirmity of mind nor is under the influence of intoxicating, narcotic or other substances but only from a defect of reason or volition at the time of the commission of the offence, then it is considered a mitigating circumstance.

Paragraph 61 (i²) If the offender is suffering from a loss of reason or volition induced by intoxicating or narcotic substances acquired knowingly and of his own free will, he is punishable for the offence that is committed if there is a specific intent and if that offence would have been committed without the use of intoxicating or narcotic substances. If the alcohol or drugs are acquired knowingly with a view to committing that offence, then it is considered on aggravating circumstance.

2. Compulsion

Paragraph 62 - Any person who is compelled to commit an offence by force or under threat so that he is unable to resist is not criminally liable.

3. Necessity

Paragraph 63 - Any person who commits an offence out of the necessity to protect himself or others or his property or the property of others from a significant or imminent danger and who had not himself deliberately caused that danger and has no power to prevent it by any other means is not criminally liable provided that the act contributing to the offence is proportionate to the danger from which he is protecting himself. Any person who is required by law to confront that danger is not considered to be acting out of necessity.

(i) Decision No 1477 of the RCC issued on 15 September 1980 and published in Al Waqai' Al'Iraqiya. No 2799 on 29 September 1980 (see page 254) states that, if the offender, who has obtained alcoholic liquor of his own free will, commits an offence, it is not considered a mitigating circumstance that calls for leniency.

4. Age

Paragraph 64 Criminal proceedings can not be brought against any person who is under 7 years of age at the time of committing an offence.

Paragraph 65 The age of a person should be officially recorded but the chief investigator or the court may ignore that official record if it is not in keeping with the juvenile's appearance. They may also submit him to a medical examination in order to establish his age by radioactive, laboratory or other scientific means.

5. The liability of juveniles (i³)

Paragraph 66 A juvenile is considered to be any person who commits an offence while between the ages of 7 and 18.

If the juvenile is under the age of 15 at the time of committing the offence, he is considered to be a child but, if he is between the ages of 15 and 18, he is considered to be a young person.

Paragraph 67 If a juvenile commits an infraction, he should be cautioned in court rather than punished in accordance with the law or he should be handed over to one of his parents, legal guardians or foster parents with a warning to the latter to insure the juvenile's good behaviour or he should be fined whatever the penalty prescribed by law for an infraction may be.

(i) Paragraph 70 of the Juveniles' Code No 64 (1,962) states that: "Provisions relating to juveniles referred to in the Penal Code and the Code of Penal Procedure which conflict with the provisions of this Code are not enforceable in such places where they apply."

Paragraph 68 - If a child commits a misdemeanor, he should, instead of being punished in accordance with the law, be handed over to one of those people mentioned in Paragraph 67, if he undertakes in writing to insure the child's good behavior. The period for this should not be less than 6 months and should not exceed 3 years from the date of the ruling. He may also be confined in a reform school for a period of not less than 6 months and not exceeding 3 years or he may be fined whatever the penalty prescribed by law may be.

Paragraph 69 - If a young person commits a misdemeanor, he should, instead of being punished in accordance with the law, be ordered to undergo one of those measures set out in Paragraph 68 or be confined in a school for young offenders for a period of not more than 3 years or fined, whatever the penalty prescribed by law for that misdemeanor may be.

Paragraph 70 - If a juvenile commits a felony or misdemeanor during the period when he is in the care of one of the persons mentioned in Paragraph 68, that person who has undertaken to insure the juvenile's good behavior, should stand bail for a sum not exceeding 50 Dinars if the offence is a misdemeanor.

Paragraph 71 - The provision ceases to apply when the, juvenile reaches the age of 18.

Paragraph 72 - If a child commits a felony, he shall be sentenced to confinement in a reform school for a period of not less than 2 years but not exceeding 5 years if the felony is punishable by the death sentence or life imprisonment and a period of not less than 1 year but not exceeding 4 years if the felony is punishable by imprisonment for a term of years.

Paragraph 73 - (1) If a young person commits a felony, he shall be confined in a school for young offenders, for a period of not less than 2 years but not exceeding 15 years if that felony is punishable by the death sentence or life imprisonment.

(2) He shall be confined in a school for young offenders for a period of not less than 1 year but not exceeding half the maximum penalty prescribed for that felony if the penalty is imprisonment for a term of years. The Court may sentence a young person to confinement in a reform school for a period of not less than 1 year but not exceeding half the maximum penalty prescribed by law for that felony if the penalty for that felony is less than 10 years. However, the period of confinement in such reform school will not, under any circumstances, exceed 5 years.

Paragraph 74 - (1) The age of a juvenile at the time of the commission of an offence should be the basis for establishing his liability.

(2) If a child commits an offence and, at the time of sentencing, has become a young person, then he will be sentenced for the offence as if he was a child. The Court may also substitute a period of confinement in a reform school for the prescribed period of confinement in a school for young offenders.

(3) If a juvenile commits an offence and he has reached the age of 18 at the time of sentencing, he will receive the penalty prescribed for that offence as if he was a juvenile but the court may substitute a period of confinement in a reform school, as with the case of a child, for a period of confinement in a school for offenders. A period of confinement in a school for young offenders may also be substituted for a term of imprisonment if the offence committed is a felony, or detention, if the offence committed is a misdemeanour, for a period equal to that which can be imposed for the commission of that offence. Other penalties prescribed by law may be substituted for a fine not exceeding 50 dinars.

(4) If a child confined in a reform school reaches the age of 18, he must be transferred from there to a school for young offenders to serve the rest of his sentence. If any person who is held in a school for young offenders reaches the age of 30, he must be transferred to a prison to serve the rest of his sentence.

Paragraph 75 - if a juvenile is accused of the commission of more than one offence, he may be tried for all those offences at one time, for which one sentence may be passed. However, the court should take into consideration the offence that carries the severest penalty and pass sentence accordingly.

Paragraph 76 - (1) The sentencing of a juvenile to a period of confinement in a reform school or a school for young offenders, does not prevent him from being sentenced for a second time.

(2) If the sentence includes more than one period of confinement then the total period must not exceed 5 years in a reform school or 15 years in a school for young offenders.

Paragraph 77 - (1) If a juvenile, who has been sentenced to a period of confinement in a reform school or a school for young offenders, has completed two thirds of his sentence, the court that has passed that sentence may, on the application of the juvenile, one of his parents, legal guardians or foster parents and after examining a report from the director of the school in which he is confined or on the application of the public prosecutor, order the release of that juvenile, if it is clear that his behavior has improved. If it is not paid within this period, the court may decide to place the convicted person under police supervision for a period of not less than 1 year and not exceeding the prescribed period for his undertaking to be on good behavior. The court may also order any other precautionary measure that is compatible with his position and may absolve him from that at any time if he pays the sum or the equivalent of that sum. Paragraph 126 - If the period, during which the penalty is discharged, ends without an order being made to cancel that discharge, the precautionary measure will lapse whether that measure was operative in conjunction with the penalty or not and the sentence imposed is considered not to have been passed.

SECTION FIVE

Legal excuse and legally extenuating circumstances

Paragraph 128 - (1) Legal excuse either discharges a person from a penalty or reduces that penalty. Excuse only exists under conditions that are specified by law. Notwithstanding these conditions, the commission of an offence with honourable motives or in response to the unjustified and serious provocation of a victim of an offence is considered a mitigating excuse.

(2) The court must identify in its decision the excuse that discharges a person from a penalty.

Paragraph 129 - An excuse that discharges a person from a penalty precludes the imposition on such person of a sentence to a primary, incidental or supplemental penalty.

Paragraph 130 - If there exists a mitigating excuse for a felony for which the penalty is death, the penalty shall be reduced to life imprisonment or imprisonment for a term of years or detention for a period of not less than 1 year. If the penalty is life imprisonment or imprisonment for a term of years; the penalty shall be reduced to a period of detention of not less than 6 months unless otherwise stipulated by law.

Paragraph 131 - If there exists a mitigating excuse for a misdemeanor, the reduction of the penalty shall be as follows:

(2) If the penalty is detention plus a fine, the court will rule for only one of those penalties.

(3) If the penalty is detention without a minimum limit, the court will rule for a fine instead.

Paragraph 132 - If the court considers that the circumstances of a felony or of the offender call for leniency, it may substitute a lesser penalty for the penalty prescribed for the offence, as follows:

(1) Life imprisonment or imprisonment for a term of years not less than 15 years may be substituted for the death penalty,

(2) Imprisonment for a term of years may be substituted for life imprisonment.

(3) A period of detention of not less than 6 months may be substituted for imprisonment for a term of years.^(i⁷)

Paragraph 133 - If the court considers that the circumstances of a misdemeanor call for leniency, it may apply the provisions of Paragraph 131.

Paragraph 134 - If the court reduces a .penalty in accordance with Paragraphs 130, 131, 132 and 133, it must identify in its decision the excuse and circumstances which call for a reduction in the sentence.

(2) The commission of an offence while taking advantage of a defect in the victim's reason or his inability to resist or in circumstances in which others are unable to come to his aid.

(3) The use of brutal methods in the commission of an offence or the harsh treatment of the victim.

(i) RCC Decision No 59 issued on 12/1/82 and published in Al-Waqai' Al-'Iraqiya No 2868 on 25/1/82 states that the relinquishment by the victim's relatives of their personal right to compensation is not considered a legally extenuating circumstance.

(4) The use by the offender in the commission of an offence of his position of employment or the abuse of any authority or influence deriving from such position.

Paragraph 136 - If there exists any aggravating circumstances in the commission of an offence, the court may rule as follows:

(2) If the penalty is imprisonment for a term of years or detention, the sentence may be greater than the maximum limit for the penalty prescribed for the offence provided that the increase in the penalty does not exceed half the maximum limit. The term of imprisonment, however, may not, under any circumstances, exceed 25 years and the period of detention may not exceed 10 years.

(3) If the prescribed penalty for the offence is a fine, the sentence may be a period of detention which may amount to half the period that can be imposed in accordance with the rate of conversion prescribed in Sub-Paragraph 2 of Paragraph 93. The period, however, may not, under any circumstances, exceed 4 years.

Paragraph 137 - If there exists any aggravating circumstances in conjunction with mitigating excuses or circumstances which call for leniency, the court shall take into consideration firstly the aggravating circumstances, then the mitigating excuses and finally those circumstances which call for leniency., If the aggravating circumstances, the mitigating excuses and the circumstances that call for leniency offset one another, the court may consider them all to be irrelevant and prescribe the original penalty for the offence. If, however, these conflicting circumstances and excuses overlap the court may, in the interests of justice, give precedence to those circumstances that carry the greatest weight.

Paragraph 138 - If an offence is committed with intent to realize an illegal gain and the law prescribes a penalty other than a fine, then the sentence may, in addition to the prescribed penalty, include a fine not exceeding the value of the gain realized or intended to be realized by the offender unless otherwise stipulated by law.

Paragraph 139 - The following persons are considered to be re - offenders:

(2) Any person against whom a final judgment of misdemeanor is made and who, before the expiry of any legally prescribed period at the end of which any conviction is spent, commits a felony or misdemeanor similar to the first misdemeanor.

The offences stipulated in any of the following Sub-Paragraphs are considered to be similar to the first misdemeanor for the purposes of applying the provisions of this Sub-Paragraph:

(1) If the penalty prescribed for the offence is imprisonment for a 'term of years without qualification, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment.

(2) If the penalty prescribed for the offence is a fine, the court may impose a period of detention.

SECTION SEVEN

The multiplicity of offences and its effect on punishment

Paragraph 141 - If one act constitutes a number of offences, the offence carrying the greatest penalty must be taken into consideration and the prescribed penalty must be imposed. If the penalties are similar then one of them should be imposed.

Paragraph 142 - If a number of offences are committed as a result of a number of acts and they are inextricably linked and have a common purpose, the penalty prescribed for each one of those offences must be imposed and an order to serve the greatest penalty only must be issued. This does not prevent the convicted person from serving any incidental or supplemental penalties or precautionary measures prescribed by law or imposed in respect of the other offences.

If the convicted person is sentenced for the offence carrying the least severe penalty, he may later be tried for the offence carrying the greatest penalty. In this case, the court will order him to serve the penalty prescribed for the second sentence with an order to subtract the portion of the previous sentence actually served.

Paragraph 143 - (1) If a person commits a number of unrelated offences without a common purpose, he will, instead of being sentenced for one of those offences, be sentenced to the prescribed penalty for each of them and they will be served consecutively but. the total period of imprisonment or detention imposed on him or the total combined period of imprisonment and detention should .not exceed 25 years.

(2) If a person is sentenced for an offence committed after he has been sentenced for some other offence, the two sentences will be served consecutively (i⁸).

(3) The period of imprisonment must be asmuch as the period of detention imposed for an offence committed before the imposition of the sentence to imprisonment.

SECTION EIGHT

Suspension of sentence

Paragraph 144 - The court may, when passing a sentence of detention for a felony or misdemeanor for a period not exceeding 1 year,, order in the sentence itself a suspension of that sentence if the convicted person has not previously committed a premeditated offence and if it sees from his character, his past, his age and the circumstances of his offence any reason to believe that he will not commit a further offence.

(i) The phrase "whatever the sum total of the two periods shall be" has been deleted in accordance with Paragraph 5 of Law No 207 1970) .

The court may confine the suspension of sentence to the primary penalty or make it apply to incidental or ' supplemental penalties or precautionary measures. If the sentence is to both detention and a fine, the court may confine the suspension of sentence to the period of detention only. The court must indicate in its judgment its reasons for suspending the sentence.

Paragraph 145 - The court may, when ruling for a suspension of sentence, require the convicted person to undertake to be on good behavior during the period of the suspended sentence in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 118 or require that he make restitution in whole or in part or that he fulfils both of these provisions..

Paragraph 146 - The period of a suspended sentence may be 3 years following the date of sentencing.

Paragraph 147 - (1) A decision to reinstate a suspended sentence may be issued in any of the following circumstances:

- (b) If the convicted person commits during the period of suspension defined in the preceding Paragraph a premeditated felony or misdemeanour for which he is sentenced to a penalty that deprives him of his freedom for more than 3 months, whether or not he is convicted during this period or after it has expired.
- (c) If it appears during the period of suspension that a final judgment was made against the convicted person in respect of the circumstance mentioned in the preceding Sub-Paragraph for a premeditated felony or misdemeanour and the court was unaware of it at the time it ruled for a suspension of sentence.

(2) The ruling for reinstatement is given on the application of the public prosecutor to the court that imposes the penalty for the offence as a result of which the suspended sentence is reinstated or the reason for the reinstatement is established. This is without prejudice to any right of appeal or to the stage of the proceedings.

Paragraph 148 - The primary penalty and the incidental and supplemental penalties that have been suspended will be served as a result of the reinstatement of the sentence. An order may be made for the payment of a surety that will discharge in whole or in part the convicted person's undertaking to be on good behaviour.

Paragraph 149 - If the period of suspension comes to an end without a ruling for the reinstatement of the suspended sentence in accordance with Paragraph 147, then the sentence is considered to have been served and the surety referred to in Paragraph 145 is annulled.

Paragraph 505 - This Code shall become operative 3 months after the date of its publication in the official newspaper.

Paragraph 506 - This Code must be implemented by the Minister of Justice.

Registered in Baghdad on the fifth day of Jumada I 1389 or the nineteenth day of July 1969.

Ahmad Hasan Al-Bakr
President
Prime Minister

The Penal Code in force in Iraq today, was drawn up by the Supreme Commander of the British Forces of Occupation in Iraq on 21st November 1918, to be implemented with effect from 1st January 1919 and to be referred to as "The Baghdad Penal Code". It was called this because it was initially introduced in the province of Baghdad but was thereafter applied throughout Iraq.

When the first Iraqi constitution was established in 1925, it gave statutory force to all declarations, regulations and laws issued by the Supreme Commander of the British Forces of occupation in Iraq, including the Baghdad Penal Code as well as those issued by the civilian Governor General, the British High Commissioner and King Faisal's government, so that the legislative authorities could amend or abrogate them (Paragraph 114).

Despite the fact that the explanatory memorandum, published together with the Baghdad Penal Code, stated that this Code was "implemented as a temporary measure for enforcement in the courts set up by the military authorities in the province of Baghdad, it could be reviewed in its entirety in order to make amendments when the requisite persons were available and when there was sufficient time in which to do so". However, the Code remained in force unchanged even though new provisions were inserted and others abrogated or amended in accordance with laws passed while the code was in force.

The Baghdad Penal Code was drawn up and published in English and no Arabic translation was made for the first two years after it came into force.

The first Arabic translation appeared in 1921 and the courts enforcing the Code as well as litigants, jurists and scholars found discrepancies in a number of paragraphs between the English original and the Arabic translation, which had altered the meanings of certain stipulations and provisions. This prompted the Ministry of Justice to issue a large number of proclamations at various times in order to rectify some of the mistakes in the Arabic translation. The Ministry then required that the stipulations be enforced as amended. The courts, litigants and public at large were therefore presented with three versions of the Penal Code, the English version in which the code was originally published, the first Arabic translation and the corrected Arabic version. This made it necessary to authorise a definitive version from among the three versions and to enforce it. At this point, the position of the judiciary including the court of Cassation and that of the Ministry of Justice was uncertain. The prevalent opinion was that the most reliable version at the time the discrepancy between the English and Arabic texts came to light, should be the English version in view of the fact that the Code had been published in English and that the Arabic version was merely an unreliable translation because it differed from the original English text. The courts, including the Court of Cassation, issued many decisions in this regard but then modified its opinion and adopted a position in support of the first Arabic text because that had been issued and published by an official authority and it was therefore necessary to comply with its stipulations. On a third occasion, a position in support of authorizing the corrected Arabic version was taken because of the errors in the original translation. This view was later modified and then contested but finally the English original once again took prominence over the other versions.

The Ministry of Justice, which had issued many proclamations at various times in order to correct some of the errors arising in translation, had set up a committee consisting of law professors, judges and lawyers to make a new, official translation of the Code, had authorized the publication of the new translation and had stipulated that it was to be the official translation which must be implemented by order of the Ministry. The Ministry subsequently reviewed its position and stated that the first Arabic translation was to be the binding, official text, alterations to which could only be made by a legislative authority.

The entire matter was still open to debate and conflicting views were adopted. There was clearly confusion and concern about the implementation of one of the most important branches of public law. However, there were general as well as specific deficiencies in the Baghdad Penal Code. While the Code included elements of civil law that did not belong in a penal code and legislated for the punishment of matters that were unrelated to crime, provisions dealing with the serving of penalties were inserted even though their proper place was in the Code of Penal Procedure. Therefore, since sound legislative policy makes it necessary for a country to update its laws and regulations so that they are constantly in keeping with its developing society, the result is a change in its economic practices, the enrichment of its culture and the development of its conception of humanity and its social relationships. By updating these laws and making certain amendments and modifications as well as the occasional deletion, the legal system is able to adapt to the needs of a developing society and the requirements of a changing way of life, thereby filling the gaps which can appear between a society and its legal system if its legal statutes were to remain static.

Given the situation described above, the need to transform the Baghdad Penal code into a new code that was in keeping with a developing society, like that of Iraq, became urgent and was expressed by many people, not just within the judiciary or among those who were responsible for enforcing the Code or within university or jurisprudential circles but also in numerous sectors of the rest of Iraqi society. This need called for the drawing up of a new penal code that would be in harmony with the spirit of the times and the requirements of the society and which would fill the many gaps inherent in the Baghdad Penal Code.

As a result of repeated demands for such a transformation, numerous attempts were made to draw up a new penal code and the Ministry of Justice set up committees for this purpose, putting forward draft laws time after time from 1929 until recently. The final complete draft of the Penal Code was submitted in 1957. However, none of these draft laws were destined to be enacted because the present Code was issued and published, thereby spelling the end of the Baghdad Penal Code, which had been drawn up some fifty years before.

In formulating the principles and provisions of this Code, it was ensured that the aim of a Penal Code was achieved in accordance with jurisprudential studies and opinions, specialist university research, judicial pronouncements, the findings of Arab, regional and international committees as well as the truths and concepts laid down by the science of Penal law. Recourse was had to all these sources during the preparation of the Code in the light of actual conditions prevailing in Iraqi society, to which the Code was to apply. It was intended that the provisions of the Code should meet the need for those provisions and should be appropriate to the time and that the society and its social and economic interactions should be consistent with its desire to advance, develop and continue towards a better life.

In order to achieve that aim, Iraqi judicial procedures, the opinions of the judiciary and its judgments on matters required for inclusion in the Code were, before making any stipulation, taken into consideration as were the provisions of the Penal Codes that had been in force in Iraq over the years. The draft penal laws required for legislation as well as the penal laws of other countries, particularly other Arab countries, were reviewed in order to identify the similarities between the social principles in these other countries and those in Iraq and to be in keeping as much as possible with the principle of standardizing the provisions and rules in the Arab world as well as to throw light on what had been adopted by those countries with a view to incorporating it into Iraqi law.

The Code materialized in the light of the above considerations so that it met the desired objective. The harmonization of its principles and provisions gave prominence to this Code, which was scientifically classified and, arranged, comprehensive and free of contradiction and the clear format made it easy not only for the judiciary but also for the common man to understand its stipulations and grasp its aims without the need for a thorough knowledge of jurisprudence. The Code was also in keeping with other legislation, such as the Civil Code, the Code of Civil and Commercial Procedure, the Code for Trading Companies and the Code of Penal Procedure and eliminated the need for rectification in accordance with the explanatory memorandum of deficiencies that had been highlighted with the implementation of the Baghdad Penal Code.

These are the reasons behind the call for the enactment of this code and its publication. It is to become effective 3 months after the date of its publication in the official newspaper hereby allowing the Code to be read by Iraq's citizens, studied by its judges and to become familiar to all. On becoming operative after the requisite period of 3 months, the Baghdad Penal Code, its appendices and amendments and all penal provisions in any other Code which conflict with the provisions of the present Code as to clarity or meaning shall be cancelled.
